Labor Contract Negotiations

FY2003 Request: $461,000
Reference No: 35796

Problem: The Labor Relations operating budget does not include funding for most labor contract negotiation costs. Negotiations for the 2000-2003 contracts were funded in a special supplemental appropriation. All twelve state labor contracts expire between March 31 and June 30, 2003. Seasoned Labor Relations staff will act as chief negotiators and note takers for each team in addition to their other assigned duties. However, to effectively negotiate twelve contracts during the same period of time, some temporary, but fully dedicated staff and expertise is required. In addition, travel funds will be necessary to bring team members together from various locations in the state to the bargaining site.

Solution: Fund one time costs as a FY2003 Capital Budget item.

Timing: By statute, monetary terms must be submitted to the legislature by the 60th day of the session. This request assumes that all 12 contracts will be negotiated in time to present monetary terms to the 2003 legislature.

Negotiation preparation work will begin in early FY 2003. Bargaining teams must be established and trained; chief negotiators and note takers trained; input on contract changes collected from all agencies, analyzed, and proposed language changes developed; projected costs of benefits analyzed; recent wage and benefit changes in other northwestern states and municipalities, as well as Alaska municipalities analyzed; and options for negotiations prepared for strategic discussions with decision makers.

Upon ratification of the contracts, the Negotiations Coordinator will assist the Administration in presenting and explaining the new contracts to the Legislature.

Accurate information for decision makers. Negotiations often pivot on historical information and fast and accurate costing of proposed contract changes. Support positions will assure that accurate information is available in a timely manner both to bargaining teams and state decision makers prior to and throughout the negotiation process, and that all documents are properly managed.

Broad perspective and expertise on bargaining teams. Travel funds will facilitate appropriate statewide representation on all bargaining teams; travel will be necessary for team training and actual negotiations.
